

Working with Sources
Using APA, Sixth Edition Style
By Barbara Fister, Gustavus Adolphus College

A Checklist for Working with Sources

- Did I use the best possible evidence for my assertions?
- Are all of my claims supported by evidence? If a section of your paper needs stronger support or if you need to verify a fact, consult with a reference librarian for suggestions.
- Do my sources represent my perspective? If a source but rely on sources alternative viewpoints, substitute one that is more balanced and less likely to be considered unreliable.
- Will my readers find my sources persuasive? If your assignment calls for scholarly sources, look for those written by researchers that include documented references to other sources.
- In a literature review, have I highlighted the most significant publications? A review gives a concise overview of important research. Organize a review so readers can quickly grasp the various approaches and key issues relevant to your topic.
- Are my sources integrated into my writing smoothly and correctly?
- Do my sources back up what I say—or do they speak for me? Use sources to support your ideas, but write in your own words. Don't quote a source when a paraphrase or summary will do.
- Have I used my sources ethically? Provide a reference for anything that isn't common knowledge, even if you have used your own words.
