In 2007, the American Association of School Librarians introduced the Standards for the 21st-Century Learner—a blueprint for helping school libraries take full advantage of contemporary media and a guide for making the library media specialist an indispensable classroom partner. But how do you make that blueprint a working reality? A collection of articles from School Library Media Activities Monthly recently renamed School Library Monthly—highlighting practical ways library media specialists can help their schools implement the AASL Standards for 21st-Century Learners. Ever since the initial release of the AASL Standards for the 21st-Century Learner, School Library Media Activities Monthly magazine has consistently focused on providing librarians with the information and strategies they need to help students achieve those standards. Now from the pages of that magazine renamed School Library Monthly comes a collection that no school library or librarian should be without. 21st-Century Learning in School Libraries: Putting the AASL Standards To Work brings together the ideas and methods of leading school librarians and educators across the nation, all focused on meeting the new standards. The book begins with a survey of 21st-century learning documents and an examination of how learning has changed for today's student.
